How to open multiple.txt file(s) and save in certain format? Example files are .txt and .cpp. See this photo . There are a lot of files. How to save a part of a multiple .txt files. For example, I want to save these .txt files(file name is: Roll_Name_Label_1) to one new folder. When I open or save .txt, .txt has no file format setting. I just select Open, then.txt is opened. It's difficult to save a multiple files. Any ideas? Thank you. How to compare/compare two multiple .txt file(s)? For example, I want to know how many files and what are the file name are different. How to get the difference in multiple .txt files. Thank you. How to run .txt file? I have some .txt file. I want to run my envi application by using .txt file. Example.txt file is . However, .txt file format is unknown. The application is opened but cannot see anything. Any ideas? Do you think Microsoft Visual FoxPro developers make a database software like ENVI? I'm just thinking of .db file. This file is not handled by Microsoft Visual FoxPro. Also, .db file cannot be opened by Microsoft Visual FoxPro. Is there any other way to open database file like ENVI in Visual FoxPro? A: It is the OSX x-windows that requires the MS Visual FoxPro license to use. Simple answer: "No" Although there are tools that have a "visual foxpro" look and feel which work without the FoxPro license, that's only a matter of personal preference. The fact is that Envi (and the rest of the IDL family) simply does not provide an x-windows like user interface. You would not be able to open and edit objects in Envi if your toolbox is not compatible with Envi. A: The issue is not with Envi, but with X11, in particular the X-windows that your mac must have. It is true that you can have the envi project file open as x-windows in Xcode (e.g. by pressing Shift+Command+N) but this will only allow you to use the built-in GUI. If you
